THEATRICAL OFFERINGS

CHARLIE CHAPLIN HAS 'OTHER' SIDE

Charlie Chaplin, idol of millions—including newsboys and bankers, servant girls and social dictators—the most universally known slapstick comedian of the films, who makes his local home at the Bijou theater, where he may be seen at work even evening in the week, has another side than that so well known to the public. A "close-up" of Chaplin reveals him as a savvy businessman and an actor of artistic ability and temperament. At least this is the impression gained by W. W. Barrett of the executive board of the national board of censorship.
Barrett says: "I found him vastly different to his stage appearance, a well and stylishly dressed young man —he appeared to be but a boy—unusually intelligent, modest, not the least affected by his great popularity; very keen business sense and thrifty, and withal a hard worker who writes, acts, produces and manages." It is Barrett's idea that Chaplin will eventually prove to be one of the leading "straight" artists of the screen.
The serious feature film is "The Crown Prince's Double," with Man-rice Costello in the leading role.

TALENTED CHILD ON HAWAII BILL

One of the most talented of the child actresses is now appearing at the Hawaii theater in support of Robert Mantell and Genevieve Hammer in "The Unfaithful Wife," and it is described by film-drama critics that she will eventually develop into a noted screen star. Runa Hodges is the young lady referred to and this is far from her first appearance on the screen in this city. She will be best remembered as the child in "A Fool There Was," the first of the big Fox offerings to be presented locally.
In "The Unfaithful Wife," little Miss Hodges is seen as Stella, daughter of Count Fabio and his unfaithful wife. She is entrusted with a difficult role and her work is equally as good as in support of Theda Bara in "the fool" picture.

This offering is one of the most gripping ever screened. It is based, in large measure, on Marie Corelli story, "The Vendetta," and all of the weird and morbid scenes of the great novel are reproduced in the picture. Man-tell has a big part, so also has Miss Hammer.

"The Master Key," the Hawaii week-end serial, is rapidly nearing the end and those who have followed through the many weeks of trial and tribulation of hero and heroine are already speculating on the climax.

'ZAZA' STAR IN DIFFERENT ROLE

Pauline Frederick, who has won fame as a photoplay star in such productions as "Bella Donna," "Zaza," "The Spider" and "Sold," has appeared in characters that could hardly be classed as "stainless." Her latest vehicle, now showing at the Liberty theater, is a decided departure from all of these former roles. Here she is seen as a simple, unsophisticated child of the woods, rescued from Indians when an infant and made the drudge of a hypocritical minister and his wife and, finally, is nearly drowned by a furious mob following denouncement by the preacher on a charge of which he knows she is innocent.

Audrey is rescued from the mob by the youthful Lord Haward, who had adopted her as his ward when she was first taken from the Indians and who alone understands the spirited girl's impulses and emotions. The friendship of Lord Haward and Audrey develops into a tender but stirring romance which, together with the varying action of the drama, makes a thoroughly absorbing and thrilling photoplay.

"The Broken Coin," with Grace Cunard and Francis Ford in the leading roles, is a popular serial and as the end gradually nears the serial fans become more interested and fascinated. Just what the end will be is hard to figure out.

secretary of state and the American consul at London, is expected to return here in November. Young Henrickson has written to his parents to this effect. He is at present employed on one of the big liners plying between New York and Liverpool.

PROF. M. C. MOTT-SMITH of the University of Washington, D. C., and Prof. R. M. Lovett of the University of Chicago, left in the Wilhelmina.
They are brother and brother-in-law, respectively, of E. A. Mott-Smith, Stanley Mott-Smith returned with them to resume his studies at Cornell.

MRS. JOHN C. POOLE, wife of Artist Poole of the Star-Bulletin, was among Honoluluans sailing Wednesday for the coast on the Matson liner Wilhelmina. Mrs. Poole is on her way to Kingsville, Mo., her former home, where she will visit relatives and friends. She will also make a visit to the home of her brother in Texas.
Mrs. Poole has been private secretary to Postmaster William F. Young, who left here May 31. She will return to Honolulu about the end of this year.
